B. A. A. MEETING FRIDAY TO MAKE PLANS FOR PRACTICE NEXT WEEK

Those interested in summer baseball are asked to attend the meeting which will be held Friday, May 10, at 7.30 p. m., at the Legion Rooms. Every player, who expects to report for the first practice next week, should be there so that some idea may be gained as to what material is available from which to build a team.

A league meeting has already been held, plans discussed, with another meeting this week to draw up a schedule. The other teams are out practicing and we shall be doing the same as soon as the officers are sure that there is sufficient interest in baseball and enough fellows who really want a team. This is your opportunity to express yourself. Let's show the same old "spirit" which used to be characteristic of Bethel ball players.

Why hasn't Bethel received F. E. R. A. help to build a ball diamond as has Bryant Pond and Mechanic Falls? Would such help be forthcoming if sufficient interest were aroused here in Bethel? . . . These questions will be answered Friday night.

TEN FAVORITE HYMNS

The Third One
If Jesus Goes With Me
C. Austin Miles

It may be in the valley, where countless dangers hide;
It may be in the sunshine that I, in peace, abide;
But this one thing I know—if I be dark or fair,
If Jesus is with me, I'll go anywhere!

CHORUS
If Jesus goes with me, I'll go Anywhere!
'Tis heaven to me,
Where'er I may be,
If He is there!

I count it a privilege here
His cross to bear;
If Jesus goes with me, I'll go Anywhere!

It may be I must carry the blessed word of life
Across the burning deserts to those in sinful strife;
And tho' it may be my lot to bear my colors there,
If Jesus goes with me, I'll go anywhere!

If Mothers Only Knew

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms, and Their Mothers do not know what the trouble is.

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, etc.

Mrs. E. W. Stephan, 31 Kenberma Road, Dorchester, Mass., wrote:—"My little girl's freedom from children's diseases, colds, constipation, etc., I attribute in a large measure to the use of Dr. True's Elixir."

Dr. True's Elixir

Laxative Worm Expeller
A pure herb medicine, not a harsh stimulant; natural relief from constipation.

THE ABSENT-MINDED SHE

T. A. Daly

She called me "Jack!" but instantly she blushed as red as red could be, and bit her lips as if to show she meant not to have spoken so; all of which I was not slow to see. 'Twas something of a shock to me; I felt no very great degree of palpitating joy although she called me "Jack."

It was, indeed, a mystery until I thought of John Supplee. Was he her "Jack," I'd like to know?

You see, my given name is "Joe." The absent-minded, fickle She—she called me "Jack!"

NEW EVERY MORNING

Susan Coolidge

Every day is a fresh beginning; Every morn is a world made new. You who are weary of sorrow and sinning, Here is a beautiful hope for you—A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are passed over; The tasks are done and the tears are shed. Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover; Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled, Are healed with the healing that night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever, Bound up in a sheaf, which God holds tight— With glad days and sad days and bad days which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight, Their fullness of sunshine and sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot recall them; Cannot find and cannot atone. God in His mercy receive, forgive them! Only the new days are our own—Today is ours, and today alone.

Here are the skies, all burnished brightly; Here is the spent earth all re-born; Here are the tired limbs springing lightly To face the sun and to share with the morn In the chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning! Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain, And in spite of old sorrow and older sinning And puzzles forecasted and possible pain, Take heart with the day and begin again.

UNFOOLABLE FATHER

Strickland Gillilan

I used to do some little tricks my father disapproved; Would play with tools he'd put in place and said should not be moved;

So fishing when he'd pointed out some weeds among the corn— Do all the bad thing boys have done since first a boy was born, never stopped to figure that he'd had a boyhood, too— used to think I'd fool my dad, but now I know he knew!

He knew that when his back was turned, I'd work a little less than when he stayed about me with his rigid watchfulness; He knew his orders roused in me a little streak of mule— Was he not once as young as I, and quite as big a fool? And so, although he held his peace, this thing I say is true: used to think I fooled my dad, but now I know he knew.

Now, I've some chicks who don't agree with all their father's laws— This disobeying's not the joke I once believed it was! We'd see their rattle-brained mistakes through eyes of riper years. The wisdom crop within those eyes is watered off with tears. One day, when puzzling over their own, they'll sigh—and 'twill be true— We used to think we fooled our dad, but now we know he knew!

THE MAINE MEETING PLACE

The citizens of the town of Orrington, a farming community in Penobscot County, have decided that they will not support a petition to initiate a referendum on the increased resident hunting and fishing license law passed by the last Legislature.

Inasmuch as the townspeople were very much against the increase originally, the reasons for the change in sentiment are not without interest.

In the first place, they found that their income from summer visitors, while modest in comparison with other communities, amounted to $2700 in taxes alone. This amounts to a saving of over $2.00 in taxes to every man, woman and child in the community. In addition, an amount in excess of $10,000 yearly was spent by these visitors for farm produce, labor, and the like. They also agreed that the additional license fee would result in better fishing in the community and would serve to attract more recreational trade as well as afford residents much better fishing than they have ever had.

For these reasons, they decided that the additional 50c yearly that has been tacked on to the resident fee was in the nature of a bargain.

In line with its policy of providing additional employment for Maine citizens, whenever possible, the Maine Development Commission this week sent questionnaires to all Maine colleges to learn of the qualifications of Maine college students as camp counselors for boys and girls camps of which there are over 180 in the State, employing over 3,000 young people in this capacity.

While it will be impossible to recruit this entire force from the Maine colleges, it is thought that a considerable number can eventually be placed thereby helping Maine boys and girls in their praiseworthy efforts in financing college educations.

The Shriners of Maine, long noted for their public-spiritedness, will tell their brothers from the other 47 states all about Maine at the National Convention at Washington, D. C., June 11-14. An attractive float typifying what Maine has to offer the vacationist will participate in the huge parades in the nation's Capitol and thousands of pieces of literature will be distributed to the over 200,000 Shriners who will be in attendance.

Strawberry soils should be well supplied with such decaying vegetable matter as roots, leafy tops of plants and stable manure.

ON THE AIR

Station "D S P"

God bless you friends, of all ages and creeds, out there, on "the air," this morning. Manager Brown of this station has been very kind to us while we have been holding these weekly broadcasts; and, I am sure he will cheerfully extend the time a few minutes, so we can sing together, happily, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder." Bro. True will sing the solo part. And when he comes to the chorus, I hope a thousand, or more, voices will heartily join. Let us sing joyously unto the Lord. Put the "control" way on for volume. Do you hear the beautiful strains of heavenly music that sound the introduction? I am speaking softly so as not to mar the gracious harmony. All right, Bro. True, give us the first verse in your clear tenor.

Thank you all! That was wonderful! It brings us nearer together in spirit. I can easily imagine that I heard you singing "out there" in your homes. God hears the music of our hearts and rejoices.

Let us be thoughtful, friends. In a little while that "Trumpet" is going to sound; and the dead will be raised and, together with those who are living, will stand before God for judgment. Read the 25th chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew. The Holy Bible is authority. It is evident that this old earth has passed through countless changes, and another great cycle of time is about completed. We are living in the "Adam Dispensation." The Bible is the authority and guide for this dispensation—not for previous cycles of time which need not concern us. Jehovah refashioned the earth and created new races under Adam. I see no disagreement between Science and the Bible. Of course, you keep abreast of the times, in your reading. You are doubtless informed concerning the tremendous physical and political changes of our time. Portions of our own United States are changing to a desert-like condition, so that people have had to abandon their homes in those sections. I have not time to discuss other matters of physical phenomena. But just think, too, of the great political unrest. Nations are crying "Peace," and all the while increasing their armies and navies and air forces. They are talking one thing—and thinking and acting another.

I am daily praying that we will not be taken by surprise when Jesus comes. He has bidden us to watch for his coming. It will be sudden and frightful to many, who are indifferent. He warns that it will be as unlooked for as the coming of a thief in the night when we think all is safe and secure. "O," some one says, "don't bother me with that kind of talk. It's all 'make up' to get us excited." God have mercy on you! Ah, friend, there have been things that have happened in your life that you were not anticipating. There was one thing that came so suddenly that it filled you with fear and gloom. You well remember the time. You shudder now when you think of it. I want to bring comfort to you: take Jesus as your friend. He has knocked for a long time at the "door" of your heart.

King Jesus may see fit to call his own to himself before the next war takes place, or a portion of his elect may be permitted to witness the awful conflict. The angry nations will "pitch battle" like mad-dened dogs in a fight. They will literally tear and eat human flesh as one wolf devours another. It is dreadful the way Satan is speeding on his work.

We are in "the day" of our Lord's second coming. We are not to know the exact time. It is better for our comfort that we do not. His wonderful grace is sufficient for those who trust in him.

One moment of silence, please, as we bow our heads in prayer.... Our Father, we are conscious of our weakness; and, we ask for thy strength to invigorate us for the work unto which thou has called us each. Give us visions of thy tenderness and mercy—of thy great love. May we see Jesus in his beauty, and be ready when "The Roll is Called Up Yonder" to happily respond: "Dear Lord, here am I." Glory and honor be to thy great name, forever and ever. Amen!

This is the Evangelical Broadcasting Service of Oxford County. Ladies and gentlemen, you have been listening to D. S. Brooks of Bethel. A special talk is to be sent out over "the air" next week. Please "listen in" to the singing and message. Faithfully, your announcer, "Will B. True."

GOULD ACADEMY
NOTES

The Gould Academy Girls' Glee Club presented a unique program of songs at a well attended public assembly held Friday morning. Miss Ruth A. Leavengood, head of the department of vocal music, directed the singing and Jane Lindsay of Newport, Vermont, served as accompanist. The special selections included: "Recessional" from the poem by Rudyard Kipling and music by Reginald DeKoven; "The Lord is My Shepherd" by Koschat; "The Night Wind" by Hobson, a canon in two parts which utilized imitation in its strictest form, a leading voice beginning the melody which was later taken up by another voice and imitated exactly to develop the leading melody which was continued throughout to denote the rise and fall of the tide; "Lovely Night" from the opera "Tales of Hoffman" by Offenbach; "The Creole Love Song" by Smith; and "The Birdland Symphony" by Kierseiling, an imitation in which a cuckoo and a hummingbird that envied each other's voice are challenged by a screech owl on a nearby limb because he thinks he can prove he's champion with his little "hoot" and they accordingly sang in an amusing bird-and-symphony. The members of the Girls' Glee Club were: Helen Anderson, Lois Bartlett, Elizabeth Bean, Vivian Berry, Irene Blake, Kathryn Brinck, Marion Brinck, Muriel Brinck, Ada Cotton, Phyllis Davis, Marguerite Deegan, Florice Grover, Rita Hutchins, Dorothy Hutchinson, Ruby Jodrey, Dorothy Machia, Sylvia Merrill, Barbara Moore, Rosalind Rowe, Eleanor Vail, Mildred Vail, Marjorie Fish, Jane Chapin, Elizabeth Lyon and Jessie Brooks of Bethel, Ina Bean, Wilfred Bean and Eleanor Beck of Newry, Constance Philbrook, Helen Philbrook, and Nancy Philbrook of Shelburne, N. H., Barbara Myers of Bemis, Elizabeth Soule and Dorothy Irish of South Windham, Helen Gillis of East Haven, Conn., Betty Edwards of Barton, N. L., Marian King of Oquossoc, and Elizabeth Raynes of Bangor.

The inter-class track meet got under way Monday afternoon with the hammer and half mile. Captain Walter Grover won the hammer toss with a heave of 123 feet six inches; Willard Wight captured second place with 107 feet, and Richard Williams took third with 98. In the half mile event Frederick MacMillan, winner of last year's half mile race in the Oxford County Interscholastics, coasted home in easy winner. He was followed by Arthur Gilbert who took second, and Ed. Holt who placed third. The 100 yd. dash finals, held Tuesday afternoon, saw Dwight Stiles the winner, with Russell Burris second, and Bob Browne third. The shot put was topped by Willard Wight at 34 feet 2 inches, Walter Grover placing second, and Robert King third.

The class standing in the meet at the conclusion of the first four events is: Seniors 26, Juniors 9, Sophomores 1, Freshmen 0. The remaining eight track and field events will be held as follows: 4 dash and discus, Saturday, May 11, at 9:30 a. m.; javelin throw, high jump, broad jump, pole vault, and mile run, Monday, May 13, at 9:30 p. m. 440 yard dash.

Friday's declamations were given by R. Browne, E. Wheeler, C. Anderson, J. Waterhouse, R. King, Brooks, P. Chapman, D. Irish, Chapman, E. Holt, G. Smith. In the competition for Senior Ode, the ode written by Miss Kathryn Brinck was selected from those submitted by various seniors. This ode is adapted to the music of "The Perfect Day."

MARGARET SULLAVAN PLAYS
HELEN HAYES' ROLE IN "THE GOOD FAIRY"

Margaret Sullivan, popular star in "Only Yesterday" and "Little Man, What Now," will appear in "The Good Fairy" at Odeon Hall on Friday and Saturday of this week. Margaret Sullivan has brought to the screen the role of Lu, the little theatre usherette, created by Helen Hayes in the stage version of "The Good Fairy," the Ferenc Molnar play. Miss Sullivan brings to the role a charm, wistfulness and vivid personality which will make the character of "The Good Fairy" immortal in film history, as Miss Hayes made it in the theatre.

"The Good Fairy" was first produced in America at the Henry Miller Theatre in New York, in 1931. It is a spicy, delightfully audacious comedy, which doesn't go too far in recording the romantic career of the unsophisticated usherette, who, captivated by the heroic characters she sees on the screen, dedicates her life to doing good for others. And so, with all the high ideals of a Sir Galahad and a Don Quixote, the lovely Lu starts out on her first "good fairy" adventure.

"The Good Fairy" was presented in New York after triumphant showings in 1930 in Budapest, where it was created, and in Germany. Franziska Gaal played the Helen Hayes role in Budapest, while in the Max Reinhardt production in Germany, the good fairy was played by Grete Mosheim. In his characterization of Lu, the man who was responsible for such sophisticated plays as "Liliom," "The Phantom Rival," "The Swan" and "The Guardsman," has epitomized the Cinderella ideal, cleverly intermingled with his avowed beliefs that all women are congenital liars; that they are splendid actors and generally ruinous to the happiness of men. And in "The Good Fairy," the happiness of three men comes near to being wrecked under the magical spell of Molnar's heroine.

TARGET OF PLOT

Startling details of an extortion plot aimed at Barton Sewell, young Beverly Hills (Calif.) millionaire, were disclosed as investigators for the district attorney's office pressed an intensive investigation which they admitted they have been carrying on for several weeks. The disclosures followed close on the heels of the filing of a sensational group of marital suits in which Sewell also is involved. The young man received threats that he and his mother would come to grief unless $25,000 was paid.

Australian Sheep Dogs

Headed by Kelpie, Barb It is difficult to convince the Australian or the New Zealand shepherd that the work of all herding dogs is about alike. He prefers to believe that none of the wonderfully trained German, Belgian, Pyrenean, Scotch or English breeds of herding dogs quite reach that standard of perfection he finds in his hardy and reliable Kelpie and Barb, says a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Uncertainty marks the ancient origin of most sheep dogs. The Australian dogs are no exception. We have heard too often the fanciful story of the wolf strala in the German and Belgian shepherd dogs. The like assertion is made of the prick-eared Kelpie, of his relationship with the native wild dog, the Dingoo, which is supposed to have produced his fox-like face. Black, he stands 3 feet high and weighs 55 pounds.

The smaller Barb more closely resembles the Scotch collie or our small black and white working collie. He works admirably, confining his busy movements to the driving and herding. With remarkable speed and almost human-acting mind, he performs work indicative of quick thought. Seldom does he circle the herd should his presence be needed at the opposite side. Covering the shortest line between two points, he travels at great speed, running over the backs of his charges, his light feet carrying him with the sure-footedness of a terrier scurrying over rocks.

Elect Mayor in Bethel

All over the country quaint ceremonies are observed to usher in the new mayors, says Pearson's Weekly. At a number of places the new mayor is approved by placing a ring on his finger. This ceremony has been observed for several centuries and seems to have its roots in the idea of wedding the mayor to the chief office of the borough. At High Wycombe the mayor and his aldermen are conducted to the weights and measures department of the borough offices, and there solemnly weighed and measured. At Brightlingsea the mayor is elected in the belfry of the parish church. At Bourne and at Hanley, Staffs, the retiring mayor and the new one embrace each other. Feasts play a part in the election of mayors. At Yarmouth it is a sprat feast, and at Peterborough the chief items are champagne and sausages.

Registering Births in England

No proof or sworn statement is required when registering a birth, marriage or death in England. Thus it is easy to record the "birth" of a bogus baby when desiring an increased unemployment allowance, to secure a marriage license when already married, or to obtain a death certificate in a murder case from a credulous physician, as he is not obliged to examine the body and determine for himself the cause of the death.—Collins's Weekly.

England's Chancellor of Exchequer

The duties of the chancellor of the exchequer are concerned with the collection of revenues and the management of the funds accumulated. The chancellor of the exchequer of England holds a position similar to the treasurer of the United States. There is a difference between this and a secretary of the treasury who corresponds to the director of the finance department of England.

Coot Not Member of Duck Family; Called "Mud Hen"

The term "mud hen" is a nickname for the coot or similar water fowl. The coot, Fulica americana, is a bird of the small creeks and the shores of shallow lakes and ponds where marsh plants grow abundantly, notes a writer in the Washington Star. The foot is half webbed, an excellent arrangement for running on water when the wings lend their assistance. The coot never rises on the wing without a preliminary run on the water of from 50 to 150 feet.

The coot swims and dives quite well, but as a rule it prefers to live, as do the rails and ballinules (to which the term "mud hen" is also applied), in the edges of heavy marsh vegetation. Here it can pick up its living of buds, blossoms, seeds, aquatic insects and snails, and also hide from its enemies.

The coot is not a member of the duck family, but belongs to the rail family, Rallidae and the order Gruiformes, or crane-like birds.

CHAPTER VIII

"THANK you, sir," said Nance politely and with quiet dignity. "You are most kind to take this trouble for a stranger, and I shall never forget it." And she held out her hand.

McNamara looked in puzzlement at Nance. "What's happened to her?" he demanded.

"I'll explain to you some time. You're a brilliant chief of police and you've figured everything out to a goat's eyebrow for Penelope, but what's going to happen to me?"

"The concoction of the plan I've just outlined has given me brain fog, Lanny. It's cost me a night's sleep. I don't know what's going to happen to you and I don't care much. You're a smart woman, and if you can't figure a way out of your end of the mess don't call on me for help."

"I wish I could relish that compliment," Lanny retorted dryly. "However, if you think I'm not going to laugh myself sick over this you're a poor judge of women. Good-by, you old crook, and God bless you. Kiss him, Penelope."

A becoming modesty caused the girl to hesitate just a little, then she came to the chief and implanted a most lady-like kiss on his blue jaw. "You're very kind, Mr. McNamara," she assured him again.

"Crises," he muttered and went off.

Dan McNamara's estimate of the ability of Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti did them no injustice; indeed, they proved even smarter than their chief credited them with being. After watching Doctor Burt enter and leave the chief's house on Thursday night, when they knew the chief would not be home until midnight, they decided to investigate. The unlocked cellar door gave them pause; Flynn whispered that he was always suspicious of things that came too easy. They crept upstairs and found Dan McNamara's ex-convict guest reading in bed. Both detectives recognized him, so while Angellotti guarded him Flynn made a hurried but thorough search of the premises. They were not in the house more than five minutes.

"We've been like two pups, chasing our tails," Angellotti complained when they met at their car. "The chief's up to his old tricks, babying a convict with the con, and that's the bird Doctor Burt is calling to treat."

"The girl's been there, just the same, Amadeo, my boy. There was a lipstick on the bureau and that's something old lady McNamara don't use. And I found a roll of adhesive tape, the heel of a roll of bandage and a soiled sheet with some bloodstains on it in the dirty clothes basket in the bathroom."

Angellotti was convinced. "Where did she go?"

"She might have doubled back to that old nurse's house again, but I doubt that, because she knows that is risky."

"Well, let's give Miss Lanning's house a prow, anyhow."

Flynn was one of those hearty fellows who will try anything twice, so they went immediately to Lanny's house. The lights in front were out when they arrived, so Flynn pussy-footed around to the rear of the cottage to see if any lights were lighted there. Finding none, he listened for possible voices. Hearing none, he cautiously lifted the lid of Lanny's garbage can and bent his flashlight on it. He was rewarded for his courage by finding a stained bandage with clipped adhesive tape clinging to it. This tell-tale evidence he carried around to Angellotti; they entered their car, drove a block and inspected the clue in the light of the dash lamp. Then they silently shook hands.

"Nothing is ever lost if you know where it is," Flynn rejoiced. "We'll bone the district attorney for a search warrant tomorrow, and tomorrow night when the old lady goes home, we'll make the pinch."

"Shall we pinch her as an accessory?"

"Amadeo, my boy, unless you're looking hard for something, it's a mistake to see too much or know too much. This Lanning woman is a friend of the chief's. As far as the public ever need know we picked the girl up on the street. Angellotti nodded his acquiescence; they got the search warrant on the strength of that soiled bandage, and at nine o'clock the night arrived in their car. Flynn went to the back door and posted himself there; and Angellotti rang the front doorbell. A light was switched on in the hall presently and Lanny, dressed for the street, opened the door six inches. Angellotti had his foot in it in a flash.

"Detective Sergeant Angellotti, I have here a search warrant, giving me legal right to search your house and secure the person of Nance Belden, an escaped convict from San Quentin penitentiary. Read it an' weep!"

"You take your big flat foot out of my door and stay outside until I've read this purported search warrant or I'll shoot your foot off," Lanny informed him coldly. Angellotti withdrew his foot promptly, Lanny closed the door, and he could see her faintly through the curtained glass, reading.

"Come in," she invited—and at that moment the electric light bulb tumbled out of the upper window by Nance exploded with a loud report.

"What's That?" Angellotti Cried, Instantly Alert.

"What's that?" Angellotti cried, instantly alert. A still louder explosion reverberated in the back yard; then the voice of Flynn crying: "Hey, stop, or I'll shoot."

"Tried slipper" her out the back door, eh? Angellotti exclaimed, and dashed through the house, with Lanny at his heels. As he went out the kitchen door, Lanny slammed and bolted it behind him, and then, eyes as Dan McNamara had predicted, nature took her course. Nance dropped the remainder of the bombs and came dashing down the stairs happily. "We'll meet again," Lanny switched off the hall light, and Nance was through the front door and gone. Across the street two coupes stood at the curb, the motors of both turning over slowly.

Alternately the girl's finger was pointed at each car. "My—mother—told—me—to—take—this—one," she murmured, and when, through the aid of this childhood formula, she had made her decision, she leaped into the coupe of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti and went rapidly away. Lanny, watching her from the darkened doorway, saw that she had taken the wrong car, but was afraid to cry out and warn her. So she did the next best thing. She locked the front door behind her, climbed into the other car and drove down town to a late motion picture show. She carried the search warrant with her and while enjoying the show tore it into little bits.

Of the weeping, the groaning, the burning sensations in the eyelids, the bewilderment, the groping, ming, cursing and despair, Mrs. Flynn and Angellotti need be said. Suffice it to say that the girl was out of the house and about two miles from Lanny's departure, standing on her front steps, the valiant Flynn, dying a death, stuck manfully at his post, manning up against the kitchen door for duty's sake. Indeed they had Nance Belden, they waited for the gas, and to dissipate the gas, they ceased to weep about her after escaping from the car, but continued to gag on it. About ten-thirty he was seen, so he rang Lanny's bell, but received no answer. He noticed that their car was missing, so he summoned the Flynn around front and the worst.

"Don't speak to me," Flynn demanded passionately. "I'm not up an all-night drug store for a taxi."

"This," Angellotti hissed, "is Nance's work. Where she got the bombs if he gets 'em out of the police?"

Flynn commenced to sob, considered the barren fruits of his sacrifice.

Amadeo, swear to me, by common faith, that, come what may, high, blow low, come sorrow, happiness or health, I'll lay off this job until I get that—that huzzay!

"I swear," Angellotti trembled with the purpose.

The respective wives of the pair telephoned down to the detectives next door and informed him that the bands were confined to bed.

It was not a police car in which Nance had escaped, but the private car of Detective Sergeant Flynn, and its loss troubled him. The car was found, abandoned in the Mission, about two hours later. A glance at a odometer comforted Flynn. He had been driven six miles, and recovered from their experience) he drove in the car from Lanny's house, most direct route, to the car; thence via the route used by the patrolman who was off duty and drove the car to the central station and reported mileage was six and two-tenths.

She's holed up within a block of where she left the car, he decided.

Not such a cold trail, after all, Angellotti exclaimed. "We'll just patrol the neighborhood in moments. I'm sure she can't know she swiped your car that gave us a clue to her."

If crooks didn't make mistakes, give us the breaks, my boy, I wouldn't be where we are, he reminded him. "I think it's a good idea to intensify the druggist in the neighborhood if she's been in to buy lipstick."

round of the neighborhood, however, proved barren lead, and as they had no other claims their attention were forced to abandon each that day.

McNamara was much to go to make inquiries of the district attorney who had the search warrant, and informed that Flynn and Angellotti were down with flu he called Lanny at Stephen's office, and a meticulous report.

the girl fled in the car my friend in? he queried. "A description of the car have been broadcast to the police and the surrounding stations immediately and Angellotti, and Nance picked up somewhere else."

"We've done our damndest," replied cheerfully, "Angellotti, I borrowed the car out front. It's in a garage, you the claim check."

For a week, the chief waited for Nance Belden, but no word came through beyond some gossamer and the central station that had been driven but three miles then abandoned—for what reason that the Almighty was his side the worthy fellow.

So Nance was still in the city!
McNamara's mind worked so automatically he did not even have to tell himself that, undoubtedly, she had taken sanctuary within a short distance of the spot where she had abandoned Flynn's car, nor did he have to remind himself that Flynn and Angellotti would come to the same conclusion. He had no difficulty in ascertaining the spot where the car had been recovered.

"Folsom street and Sixteenth, eh?" he reflected. "Residential—flat buildings and cheap apartment houses, cheap rooming houses and workmen's hotels. No, she wouldn't go to one of those. Not what she is—she has class—and she has two hundred dollars in her possession. She's holed up with a friend.
What friend? Why, Ella Cates, of course."

He had already secured Ella Cates' address from the banker in San Jose. However, he realized it would not be wise to call upon her and run the risk of having Flynn or Angellotti run across him in the neighborhood or see him entering Ella Cates' house. The obvious thing, therefore, was to cast about for a job in another part of the city and see that both detectives were assigned to it.

While he was considering where he could dispose of them, the president of the Security Trust company in San Jose rang up.

"Miss Penelope Gatlin has just been in the bank, Chief," he told McNamara. "She has purchased a letter of credit for ten thousand dollars and has withdrawn in cash the remainder of the funds on deposit to the credit of her checking account, amounting to eleven hundred dollars."

"Is she in the bank now?"

"Yes."

"Have one of your clerks follow her. Give him some expense money —I'll be responsible for its repayment. And when you get his report please telephone me."

At three-thirty the banker telephoned again. "She purchased a ticket to San Francisco, on one of the buses leaving here at three fifteen. She spent two hours shopping."

The buses, McNamara knew, entered the city via Mission street, the bus depot was at Fifth and Mission streets. Ella Cates lived on Howard street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth. Howard street runs between Mission and Folsom—and Flynn's car had been found abandoned at Sixteenth and Folsom.

Nance was smart. She had left the car a block from Ella Cates' home and a street above. McNamara reasoned the incoming bus would drop the girl out at Sixteenth and Mission streets—a regular stop—and she would then make her way to the Cates woman's house.

He glanced at his watch. He had an hour and a half to intercept her; for that hour and a half he must have Flynn and Angellotti in another section of the city. To his annoyance he discovered they were out on a detail, so he decided he would have to risk it, called a taxi and drove to Ella Cates' address. To his inquiry regarding Mrs. Cates, he was informed that she had moved to parts unknown a week before, nor could his informant give him any clue to aid him in discovering her.

As he came out of the apartment house he glanced warily around and was amused to observe Detective Angellotti leaping against a cigar stand across the street. He was certain the detective had recognized him, for Angellotti immediately turned his back. The chief walked up Mission street, boarded a street car and was at the bus terminal two minutes before the bus on which Nance had left San Jose rolled in.
But Nance was not among the passengers that alighted.

McNamara chuckled. Flynn and Angellotti would waste a great deal of time watching that apartment house in vain. Nance, discovering Ella Cates had moved, had sought quarters elsewhere. What puzzled McNamara, however, was the girl's failure to communicate with him or Lanny; and he knew now that she did not intend to. The fact that she had purchased a letter of credit was proof that she intended leaving the country, and the more the excellent fellow contemplated this impending move the more inclined was he to regard it as a not unkind blessing. While Nance remained in San Francisco she would be a constant menace to himself and Lanny; if captured she might, during one of her uncontrolled moments, consider it a great joke to tell the world how she had been enabled to escape captivity so long.

"I can't baby the world," he decided. "I'll let her go. She'll probably live abroad, and when her letter of credit is gone she may remember who she is long enough to draw more checks. I can always get a line on her through the bank, and if Steve and Lanny still insist on salvaging this nut I'll tell them where to find her. Me, I'm through.
If I keep this pace up I'll be as big a nut as she is."

There is more than a modicum of truth in the ancient adage, "Out of sight, out of mind." Dan McNamara lived a full life; and when Nance Belden had definitely passed beyond his ken and he knew himself safe at last from the prying of Messrs. Flynn and Angellotti into his private affairs, he forgot the girl, for pressing matters of great importance claimed his attention and he required more first-class assistance than he was receiving. He resolved, therefore, to give Flynn and Angellotti a week in which to make up their minds they had lost the trail; then to call them in.

On the sixth day, however, he received information that the doughty pair were still as busy as two pups with a feather duster. A beautiful lady called on him at his office and told him so.

"And who might you be?" he demanded.

"I'm Susan Engelbright."

"Oh! Alias Sapphire Susie. I've heard of you lately."

"Perhaps, I hooked three twelvecarat sapphire rings to raise money, and the papers called me Sapphire Susie after that."

"I see you got them out of hock again, Susie."

The girl nodded. "Nance Belden got them out for me."

"Part of the bargain for smuggling that letter out of San Quentin for her, I suppose."

"Never mind what it was for," Sapphire Susie smiled archly and unafraid. "I earned it and she kept her word."

"Check or cash?" McNamara was frightened. If Sapphire Susie had been given a check, then she knew Nance Belden's real name and the name of her bank. And that would be fatal.

"I don't know. I gave her the pawn tickets and she got back the rings. I don't know just how."

"When?" He was relieved.

"A week ago tomorrow."

"And you say Detective Sergeant Flynn has been giving you a bad half hour?"

"Yes, he has."

"Well, that's his business. Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin and naturally he's interested in apprehending her. You were recognized by the guard at the main gate two weeks before Nance escaped.
Miss Lanning, a friend of the Belden girl, had visited the prisoner that day, and since Miss Lanning was the only visitor Nance Belden had in San Quentin, naturally she was suspected of carrying a letter for delivery to the men who helped Nance escape. You rode down to Greenbrae with Miss Lanning, and she slipped the letter to you, of course. Flynn knows that. But why come to me with your tale of woe?"

"I've run straight since getting out of the pen. I served my time and I want to be let alone—that's why! Flynn told me that if I didn't come through and tell him where he could find Nance Belden he'd see to it that something nasty happened to me. I don't know where Nance Belden is. And I want protection from Patrick Flynn."

"You seem pretty sure of me, don't you?"

"Well, Nance told me that you were one human being. And I called on Miss Lanning last night to tell her to warn Nance that the dicks were after her, and Miss Lanning told me to see you about it. She said you'd see I got a square deal."

"She did so, now? How did Miss Lanning treat you otherwise?"

"She kissed me and gave me a hundred dollars and told me to be as good as I could. The old girl is sure a darling."

"Did you ask her for the hundred?"

"Of course not."

The chief eyed her owlishly, for he distrusted Sapphire Susie and wondered if she might not be working in the interests of Flynn and Angellotti.

"This is interesting," he admitted heavily. "Of course I only keep in touch with the upper office through the captain of detectives.
If he set Flynn on this job he should have interviewed you a couple of weeks ago. Seems to me he has overlooked a good bet. If he'd had you under surveillance a week ago he'd have picked up Nance Belden when she came to you to deliver the rings. Flynn's a crackjack detective," he added sadly, "but this looks as if he's slipping."

"That bird don't slip very far, take it from me, Chief. He met me on the street the day before yesterday and noticed I was wearing my big ring and my eardrops. 'Hello, kid,' he says, 'I see you got your sapphires on again.' I says to him, 'Fall dead, you bum,' and walked on. And the next night he came up to my room. 'Nance Belden got them sapphires out of hock for you, Susie, my dear,' he says kindly. 'I want that frill. Where is she?'"

"And you wouldn't tell him, even if you could?"

"That's a fact. I wouldn't snitch on her."

"You wouldn't expect me to interfere in the work of a detective sergeant when he appears to be doing a good job, would you, Susie?
But I give you my word that if you run straight in this city I'll see to it that you're not harassed.
Of course you helped Nance Belden to escape from San Quentin, and I know it, but I can't prove it; if I could I'd put you in the birdcage this minute. And I'll not put Flynn off the case, although if he gets too rough I'll stop him."

"He's got me scared to death," Sapphire Susie declared, and commenced to weep a little; whereat

"He's Got Me Scared to Death," Sapphire Susie Declared.

McNamara realized she had been really frightened. She shook his hand warmly, thanked him and departed.

For several minutes McNamara sat thinking, a smile, faintly tender, illuminating his rugged countenance. So Lanny had kissed Sapphire Susie and given her a hundred dollars and begged her to be a good girl in the future. What a rare good sport Lanny was! And how good God had been to all concerned! In their pursuit of Nance, Flynn and Angellotti had followed such a hot trail they had forgotten Sapphire Susie was a pal of Nance's, and afterwards, when the trail grew cold, they had suddenly remembered her.

That Flynn was a marvel, and McNamara sighed to think the fellow could not be promoted instantly. In all probability he had not at first connected Nance Belden with the glory of Susie's sapphires. Undoubtedly he had jumped to the conclusion that the girl had been up to her old trick of blackmailing some wealthy and socially prominent mss-sulline Jackass. So he had looked up her record in the police files. Here he had discovered something that must have convinced him of Susie's total innocence of sapphires during her trial; certainly she had not carried them to San Quentin with her, and the obvious conclusion was that she had pawned them to raise money to pay her attorney. In the heat of discovering the identity of Susie's latest victim (who, he assumed, had redeemed them for her) Flynn had thereupon made a round of the pawnshops and located the one from which the jewels had lately been redeemed; from the pawnbroker he had secured a description of the one who had redeemed them. No pawnbroker would be likely to forget Nance Belden's nose!

McNamara shuddered. If Nance should visit Sapphire Susie now, she would undoubtedly walk straight into the arms of the waiting Flynn or Angellotti.

Well, Nance Belden had stolen a dozen pairs of silk hose, but apparently Penelope Gatlin paid her debts. The chief wondered if he had loaned Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin two hundred dollars, for of course, they were two separate and distinct personalities inhabiting the same body. If Nance Belden had accepted the loan, then McNamara could kiss the money good-by. If, on the other hand, Penelope Gatlin had accepted it, then, some day, when Nance had changed places with Penelope, he would get it back. Well, he could trace her progress through the world by the drafts she would cash.
Her bank in San Jose would give him that information.

He took down the telephone and called the bank. Yes, a draft had just come in. Drawn for four hundred and thirty-five dollars in favor of the French line, dated three days previously at New York. It had come across the continent by air mail. McNamara thanked the president of the bank and called up the French line's San Francisco office.
After some difficulty he discovered that four hundred and thirty-five dollars was payment of one first cabin passage to Havre and that the Ile de France had sailed from New York during the past three days.

Instantly Dan McNamara shot a straight telegram to police headquarters in New York, requesting that the passenger list of the Ile de France be checked to see whether Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin had taken passage on her. Four hours later he received a reply to the effect that Nance Belden was not aboard but that Penelope Gatlin was.

"Nothing is lost if you know where it is," McNamara decided happily, and sent a cable to the prefect of police at Havre, requesting him to pick up Penelope Gatlin on her arrival at that port, shadow her and report by cable, collect, the girl's destination, the names and addresses of those who should meet her and any other information that would aid in keeping track of the girl.

To be continued next week.

Sunday School at 10 o'clock.
Services Sunday morning at 10:45.

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 12.

The Golden Text is: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3: 14, 15).

Among the citations from the Bible is the following: "For if by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ" (Romans 5: 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "As in Adam (error) all die, so in Christ (Truth) shall all be made alive" (p. 545: 31-32).

Wednesday testimonial meeting at 7:30 p. m.

WITH OR WITHOUT DELUXE EQUIPMENT

A FORD is always a FORD V-8

EVERY FORD CAR HAS:

— the same, economical, 85 horsepower V-8 engine

— the same, new, Comfort-engineered Chassis

— 6.00 x 16" air-balloon tires and Safety Glass all 'round at no extra cost

IMPORTANT FORD FEATURES COMMON TO ALL BODY-TYPES

- 85 h. p., V-8 engine, with aluminum cylinder heads and dual, downdraft carburetor.
- 123-inch springbase for riding ease on a 112-inch chassis for handling ease.
- Torque-tube Drive.
- Front seat 50" wide... Ample luggage space in all models at no extra cost.
- Welded steel-spoke wheels with 4" rim.
- All-steel body welded into one piece.
- Big, positive brakes with more braking surface for car weight than any car under $1095.
- 4 double-acting automatic shock absorbers.
- 6.00 x 16" air-balloon tires.
- Safety Glass all 'round.

It is common practice, nowadays, to find two quite different automobiles sold under the same name. This difference will run all the way from a difference in horsepower, chassis and body design to a difference in the number of cylinders. No such difference exists between one Ford V-8 and another. Ford builds only one size of car with the same V-8 engine on the same 112-inch chassis. The springbase is 123 inches; all passengers ride centerpoised—between the springs in the "Comfort Zone."

The only difference between a Ford V-8 and a Deluxe Ford V-8 is in equipment—not in engineering... And even here, two major items—Safety Glass all 'round and 6.00 x 16" air-balloon tires—are standard equipment on all Ford cars at no extra cost.

Therefore, when you are choosing your 1935 car, good judgment demands you check the list of features shown above. All of them are found on every Ford car built and without them no automobile can be considered a true 1935 value.
